Jane Folk is an independent documentary film writer and producer whose creative focus has been directed at various social and cultural issues. A long time resident of Memphis, Jane's first documentary effort Pork Chop Day was selected for the 2007 Nashville Film Festival as well as the 2007 Indie Memphis Film Festival. This film which was produced in collaboration with the YWCA of Greater Memphis and SOAR, Survivors of Abusive Relationships, tells the gripping story of Debbie Knapp who was imprisoned 21 years for murdering her abusive husband and who later became the first woman in Tennessee paroled from a life sentence for killing her abuser. The documentary is currently scheduled to be an integral part of an ongoing regional and national educational program to raise awareness and to promote prevention of spousal abuse. Jane's current projects reflect her driving passion to use film to speak to injustices in society.

In addition to Pork Chop Day, Jane has worked on a number of other projects including serving as assistant producer for an upcoming documentary on infant mortality produced in association with Professors David Appleby and Craig Leake and the University of Memphis. Jane has also served as producer/photographer/writer for various video projects for Memphis Theological Seminary. These latter projects include Return Beat: Syncopating Theology and the Arts Institute which promotes the seminary's art and theology institute and the Honoring the Hands of Hope video production aired in conjunction with the 2008 Henry Logan Starks Scholarship Dinner which honors the contributions of African American alumni and other Memphis community leaders.

Jane Folk holds a Bachelors of Arts degree in Art History from the University of Georgia; a Masters of Business Administration degree from the University of Memphis and is a May, 2008 candidate for a Masters of Arts degree in Religion from Memphis Theological Seminary. In addition, she has studied at Duke University's Center for Documentary Studies and has been engaged in independent study projects with the film department at the University of Memphis.

Jane is a member of the Board of Directors of the YWCA of Greater Memphis and has been an active volunteer with various groups involved in addressing issues of social justice in the Memphis community, including Manna House, which addresses the needs of the homeless. She is a former member of the Board of Directors of the Memphis Alcohol and Drug Council. Jane is a volunteer for On Location: Memphis International Film Fest 2008 and is an ordained elder at Idlewild Presbyterian Church.
